TRADITIONS, GEOGRAPHY, GASTRONOMY SWEET WINES OF ANJOU-SAUMUR

The white wines of Anjou-Saumur come mainly from one grape variety: Chenin. The vines benefit from a micro-climate thanks to the proximity of these rivers, which bring mist in the morning and warmth in the daytime. These weather conditions favour the development of a fungus on the grapes : the botrytis cinerea, also called the « noble rot ». It makes the skin of the grapes softer, which enables water to evaporate more easily, thus raising the sugar level in the grapes. This explains how wine-growers are able to produce such superior sweet and liquorous wines such as the Coteaux-du-Layon, Coteaux-de-l'Aubance, Bonnezeaux, Quarts-de-Chaume... Anjou is one of the main regions in France for sweet wines. Such wines as these can be kept for several decades.

After the revocation of the Edit of Nantes in 1685, some French Huguenots, having first emigrated to Holland, found
